Hi –

Earlier today, you said that Kavanaugh “tiptoes around the truth?” This is insane! I suppose there was a certain amount of tiptoeing, but so what? The important thing is the huge pile of plain old lies:

- He lied about boofing.
- He lied about ralphing.
- He lied about Renate.
- He lied about the devil’s triangle.
- He tiptoed around the meaning of the FFFFFFFFourth of July.
- He lied about the advantages he had when applying to Yale.
- He lied about the stolen emails.
- He lied again and again about the supposedly exculpatory evidence.
- And so on.

You also said “His credibility is in real doubt?” No, sir, there is no doubt about this. Ford is credible. Kavanaugh is not. You need to stop tiptoeing around the obvious truth:

Kavanaugh lied again and again.

He cannot be trusted, and that’s what’s at issue here. Somebody who cannot be trusted is unfit to serve as a federal judge.

The original accusations have served as a catalyst, allowing him to reveal his true character. He politicized the accusation, then lied and lied and lied. That’s all you need to know at the moment. Getting to the bottom of the original accusations will be important eventually, for the sake of basic justice – but that’s not in the critical path. The FBI investigation is nice, but we don’t actually need it. We already know that Kavanaugh cannot be trusted.

Yours truly,
